

People Like Us: A One Day Conference

*Friday 16th April 2010
Manchester Conference Centre*

This free to attend conference will examine and discuss the origins and implications of ethnic concentration, or ethnic density. Four sessions will cover key topics, each with two papers, a response from a discussant and plenty of time for broader discussion among the conference attendees, who will include academics and those working in the policy arena from central and local government and from NGOs.

Migration, mobility and deprivation

Professor Ludi Simpson, CCSR, Patterns of concentration and how they arise

Professor Yaojun Li, ISC, Where am I in the queue? A study of the impacts of ethnic concentration and diversity on minority ethnic employment in Britain and the US (1990-2000)

Social capital and civic participation

Dr Laura Morales, ISC, Immigration, Diversity and Social Capital in Spain. A longitudinal perspective

Professor Eric Uslaner, University of Maryland, Trust, Diversity, and Segregation in the United States and the United Kingdom

Racism and tolerance

Alfonso Echazarra, CCSR, Ethnicity and perceived crime in Spain: three alternative stories

Dr Laia Bécades, UCL, The ethnic density effect on experiences of racism among ethnic minority people in the UK

Health and health inequalities

Professor Kate Pickett, University of York, Ethnic density effects on physical health

Dr Mai Stafford, UCL, Neighbourhood ethnic density and health: evidence and explanatory pathways

If you are interested in attending this free conference, please book your place at <http://www.ccsr.ac.uk/events/peoplelikeus/>

The conference is organised by CCSR and ISC at the University of Manchester, the Department of Epidemiology and Public Health, UCL, and the Department of Health Sciences, University of York. Some of the conference funding and several of the papers are drawn from two research projects, one funded by the Medical Research Council and the other by the Economic and Social Research Council.